

Educational Resources

In 2025, our Educational Resources Program supported students in northern and remote Indigenous communities by helping ensure they had the tools they needed to start and succeed in the school year. Through our Back to School program, students received backpacks filled with essential school supplies, removing barriers for families and helping children arrive at school prepared and confident from day one.

Complementing this work, Northern Reads strengthened community literacy by providing culturally relevant books to schools and libraries. These resources support learning while also affirming identity, language, and lived experience, helping young readers see themselves reflected in the stories they read.

Together, these programs focused on equity, access, and dignity, recognizing that education begins with having the right resources at the right time, no matter where a child lives.
